Just In Time
Written and recorded by Marty Robbins

```
G                              C
Tomorrow I'll be married tomorrow you'll be blue
D7                                                  G
Tomorrow you'll just sit and cry the way I used to do
                                  C
Tomorrow you'll be lonesome you'll sit alone and wait
    D7                                                  G
You came back just in time old friend in time to be too late

                                  C
I waited for your letters but you would never write
  D7                                          G
I waited by my window watching for you day and night
                                  C
But that all happened yesterday and my heart holds no hate
    D7                                                  G
You came back just in time old friend in time to be too late

                                  C
You're invited to my wedding now don't forget to come
    D7                                                      G
And see how wrong you were when you thought you could fool around
                                  C
Tomorrow there'll be teardrops but I will understand
     D7                                           G
I'll see you crying when I place my ring upon her hand

                                  C
You've no right to be angry the fault is all your own
    D7                                          G
You wouldn't even write to me you wouldn't even phone
                                  C
But sometimes there'll be better days for them you'll have to wait
    D7                                                  G
You came back just in time old friend in time to be too late
